

Population Migration from State to State

Mouseover to focus on rides to or from a single neighborhood.

The thickness of links between neighborhoods encodes the relative frequency of rides between two neighborhoods: thicker links represent more frequent rides.

Links are directed: for example, while 2.2% of rides go from South of Market to Downtown, only 1.2% go in the opposite direction. Links are colored by the more frequent origin.

Scroll down for more!

Built with D3.

